Two area schools listed among best in New York

By MARIE McCULLOUGH
Times-Union

Once considered the worst school in Rochester, the school on Genesee Street has emerged as one of the best secondary schools in the state.

Now called the Joseph C. Wilson Magnet High School, it's been named by state education officials as one of the 10 best senior high schools in New York. Another local school, Brighton's French Road Middle School, has been named one of the state's 10 best junior high schools.

Both will go on to represent the state in the U.S. Department of Education's national Secondary School Recognition Program, which honors junior high and senior high schools considered to be educational role models.

For Wilson, chosen from among 76 high schools that applied, the award marks the end of a long, often difficult transformation.

Wilson has for years been the City School District's chameleon — going from a high school to a junior high school to a junior high magnet school before the latest incarnation, which was completed this year with the addition of a senior class.

During those changes, the school's reputation also rose and fell, hitting bottom as a junior high school known for tough problems with discipline and academic standards.

Now, Wilson is considered tough because of its high academic standards.

"I kind of like the idea that we've made the transition," Principal Henry Williams said today.

To win the recognition awards, each school filled out an 18-page application that detailed graduation requirements, test scores, numbers of students in Regents courses, parent and community involvement, and goals and objectives.

Last year, another local school — Greece Athena High School — went all the way to the top. It was selected as one of 202 best high schools in the nation under the recognition program, which was begun three years ago under the Reagan administration.

Wilson, with an enrollment of about 700, offers two types of special "magnet" programs. Each requires 23½ credits for graduation, compared to 18 credits required by the state.

Students in the Science and Technology program take extra math and science and learn computer programming. Students in the inspirationally titled Academy of Excellence commonly take two foreign languages — including Latin — plus humanities and communications courses.

As in the district's other magnet high schools, there are no study halls at Wilson. But unlike the other magnets, which are housed within traditional high schools, Wilson has its own, separate staff, students and a building that has undergone $3.9 million worth of renovations.

That has inspired feelings of envy, if not resentment, among some parents of students in the traditional high schools. But Williams and his staff — vice principal Richard Orczyk, and program administrators Sue Johnston and Gary Simon — point out how hard Wilson has worked to get where it is.

The French Road Middle School, which was selected from among 39 applicants, has 417 students in fifth through ninth grades.

Principal Roy Welkley attributed the school's success to a combination of factors.

"The staff is child-oriented, we have dedicated teachers, we're blessed with beautiful students and supportive parents," he said.

Varsity Football, in only its second season, was City-Catholic Division II Champions with 4-0 league and 6-3 overall records. They made it to the sectionals. The football team was the first team from Wilson to win a championship. 1983-84 was a tough year with only one win, but the Wildcats came back and had a winning season this year. Eight members of our team were named to the All-City Team along with our coach, Joe Camillaci, who was named All-City Coach of the Year. Two members of our team will also be in the Eddie Meath All-Star game in August. Our first senior class contributed much to our team, and will be missed.

DEDICATION

This yearbook is dedicated to a determined, motivated, and wonderful individual. Dr. Williams has been the driving force behind Wilson Magnet's continued success. As principal of our school since 1979, he has displayed great leadership skills, as well as a warm and caring personality to everyone with whom he has worked. Dr. Williams' growth with the school-students, staff, administrators, parents and the community has been invaluable. On behalf of everyone at Wilson, we extend our greatest wishes to him for further success and hope for a future as brilliant as his past seven years. Dr. Williams will not be forgotten for many years to come.
